

Leather

Characteristics, use and maintenance

The material

The leather used is a natural product; if some abrasion, scars or halos would appear, they are part of its originality and identity, therefore, they should not be taken as defects, but as an index of the quality of the material.

The condition of natural and "living" material means that this changes with the pass of time, will acquire a different aspect.

Maintenance

For maintenance and protection, it is recommended to clean the leather in the following way: for oil, grease or butter stains, use a soft cloth a little soaked in warm water and neutral soap, alternatively with cleansing milk.

It is recommended to remove stains immediately, otherwise, absorption by the leather could prevent from their removal.

It is recommended not to use chemical detergents and generic products, which indicate "for all surfaces".
